[illegible] of Education [illegible] Requests and [illegible] School Reports

Auditorium Opened for [illegible] Music Week and Federation—Van Ingen Reports.

[illegible] action taken by the board [illegible] at its regular meeting [illegible] was to grant a request [illegible] Paul A. Zuna, who [illegible] behalf of the musical organizations [illegible] of Kingston, for the use [illegible] school auditorium on [illegible] afternoon [illegible] on Sunday, May 7. [illegible] is the [illegible] beginning of National [illegible] Week [illegible] and the musicians of the city will [illegible] again contribute their services, giving [illegible] a concert for the benefit of the [illegible] general public and [illegible] ing their part [illegible] toward popularizing this national institution.

A communication from the Federation of Women's Club, asking that the date of [illegible] April 2 for the use of the auditorium [illegible] be cancelled and that permission [illegible] be given for its use on April 24 [illegible] granted. It was stated that the [illegible] play they proposed to give [illegible] not be ready on the earlier date [illegible]. The proceeds of the entertainment will be for the benefit of the Federation and for welfare work in the city.

Vouchers amounting to $22,281.[illegible] were audited. These included $19,461.25 payment on bonds and interest due. There are bonds still outstanding to the amount of $47,[illegible]00. Salaries for March to the amount of $[illegible]34,533.69 were audited.

Resolutions submitted by the supplies committee call for bids for fuel oil to be used at the high school building during the ensuing school year, for coal for the schools and for furnishing general supplies and library books. Bids are to be submitted [illegible] next meeting of the board.

Superintendent Van Ingen submitted his monthly report, which commended the work being done in the dental clinics sponsored by the Kiwanis Club. It stated that during the first [illegible] months of the present school year Dr. Jones had treated 97 school patients, necessitating 213 appointments. The report was mainly occupied with the work done by the evening school, of which Frank L. Meagher is principal, and Mr. Meagher's report was submitted in full. It showed among other things that during the school year closed 225 students had registered, their ages running from 17 [illegible]. This is the largest registration [illegible] for evening school here. [illegible] of the Americanization and citizenship training work of the school was indicated by the statement that there are in Kingston over 250 illiterates and it was noted that attempts to reduce the number had not met with the success that the labor expended deserved.

Following is Superintendent Van Ingen's report in full:

To the Board of Education.

Gentlemen:

During the month the usual number of visits to the different schools has been made.

The medical department has been unusually busy on account of the epidemic of measles interspersed with some whooping cough.

The dental clinic provided by the Kiwanis Club is rendering its usual efficient service for the children of our grade schools. During the first four months of this school year, September, 1932, to January 1, 1933, Dr. Jones served 97 school patients necessitating 213 appointments. During January 105 appointments were made with 30 different students, and in February 139 appointments with [illegible] different students.

The most important work consists of immediate elimination of potential sources of infection, cleaning teeth to benefit health of child, removing temporary teeth and filling permanent ones. Dr. Jones states that a large per cent of the work of the clinic is extractions. The patients are practically all undernourished and the teeth, therefore, vary greatly in texture.

It is unnecessary to state that this clinic is meeting a real need. None of these boys and girls could have dental service had it not been for this service. The work is resulting in better attendance, improvement in general health and adding to the comfort of the child.

Mr. Meagher, principal of our evening school, has submitted his final report for the year 1932-1933. Because of its comprehensiveness and [illegible]on, I am submitting it in full for your information.

Supt. B. C. Van Ingen,
Kingston, N. Y.

Methodists Holding Conference Firm in Stand Against Wets

New York Annual Conference of Methodist Episcopal Church To Battle Against Repeal of Prohibition.

The 124th session of the New York Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was featured Friday in New York by a new battle against prohibition repeal, the saloon and for the protection of the youth who have "never seen open saloons with drunkards reeling from their swinging doors."

More than 500 laymen and clergymen adopted unanimously a resolution dealing with the liquor question after hearing speeches from leaders of the New York State Anti-Saloon League and Women's Christian Temperance Union.

The resolution calls on all members of the Methodist Episcopal Church for renewed battle against the liquor interests in every phase because these interests seek to bring back the open saloon and clear the way not only for beer but all kinds of wine, gin, whiskey and hard liquors.

It was urged that the 13th amendment be supported; that any law adopted shall seek the greatest possible safeguards to the general public; that the people be educated to the evils of drink, especially the younger generation; that vigilant committees be organized to prosecute breakers of the law and that all watch, fight and pray that the demon rum may never again come to our land.

A suggestion was made that anti-repeal posters be put on all Methodist Episcopal churches, although Dr. S. Parkes Cadman cautioned ministers against concentrating on prohibition to the exclusion of more important problems such as unjust economics and corrupt politics.

Using Golden Hammer Pope Pius Opens Holy Door Into St. Peter's

Inaugurates Holy Year in Commemoration of 1900th Anniversary of Christ's Death With Ceremony Begun in 1500 A. D. by Pope Alexander VI.

Vatican City, April 1 (AP)—Wielding a golden hammer, Pope Pius broke down the holy door of St. Peter's this morning and inaugurated the holy year in commemoration of the 1900th anniversary of the passion, death and resurrection of Christ.

Nearly 30 cardinals, royalty, diplomats, the Roman aristocracy, and high prelates from many nations saw the holy door of brick, loosened yesterday, fall away when the Pope struck it thrice with the hammer of solid gold. Among the cardinals were the newly created ones, Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, former apostolic delegate at Washington, and Jean Marie Rodrigue Villeneuve, archbishop of Quebec.

A great throng crowded close to the lines of papal gendarmes and Swiss guards. Most of them were unable to see anything, since the ritual of the holy door was held in the Portico, outside the cathedral proper. Later, however, they saw the pontiff at close range when he entered the basilica to impart his blessing.

Pope Pius' opening of another entrance to the enormous basilica, an entrance usually thrown open only once every 25 years, was symbolic of the stream of several hundred thousand pilgrims the Vatican expects will flow into St. Peter's during the holy year.

Ancient Ritual.

The ritual he used dates back to the time of the Borgia Pope, Alexander VI, who decreed a holy year in 1500 A. D.

Shortly before 11 o'clock this morning His Holiness, wearing a white cassock and cape, left his private apartment and with an escort of prelates and the noble guard went to the Hall of the Vestments, where [illegible]

HIGH FALLS MISSIONARY SOCIETY BIRTHDAY PARTY

High Falls, April 1—The Women's Missionary Society held a very pleasant and instructive meeting on Thursday, March 30, at the home of the president, Mrs. Oscar Church. The Women's Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church of America is celebrating its golden anniversary and every auxiliary has been asked to hold a golden birthday party. After the regular monthly meeting, at which Mrs. Church presided and read the list of the first members of the High Falls Society organized 46 years ago, she invited the society and guests into an adjoining room, where a large birthday cake, a delicious golden sunshine cake, was placed. Here a short pageant, improvised from a pamphlet issued by the board, was carried out. The color scheme was blue and gold, the colors of the Domestic Board. Dressed in costumes, the ladies lighted the candles around the cake and told of the work among the people to whom the board ministers. Mrs. Stanley Steen and little Harry Barnhart impersonated the Indian work; Mrs. Thomas Snyder and Frances Barnhart the Kentucky life; Mrs. Festus Yeaple the Italian; Mrs. Reuben Barrett and Lois Parry the Japanese in America. These children have been members of the Cradle Roll of the Domestic Board. The pageant was very simple and told in a few words the growth of the movement whose motto is "America for Christ" and the great work which has been accomplished in the half century.

Snap shots were taken of those in costume. One of the best features of the afternoon was the vocal solo by Miss Gertrude Depuy, a soloist, who is always enjoyed. At the close of the exercises refreshments were served, consisting of the birthday cake, cookies, and tea. Monthly meetings are held, and each month has a program of helpful instruction and broadening world-wide knowledge.

Maybe He Was That

Jud Tunkins says his teacher once told him he might be President some time if he'd study hard, and maybe, seein' the troubles teachers have, he was luckier for quittin' school.

Financial and Commercia

New York, April 1 (AP).—The stock market began the new mo in an uncertain frame of mind tod The list tried to rally for a tim was then pulled down by a brief fl ry of selling in the rails, but stiffen in the final dealings. The close w irregular. Transfers for the t hour session approximated 450,0 shares.

The setback in the rails shar seemed to be an aftermath of Misso ri Pacific's decision to reorganize u der the new Federal bankruptcy la Industrials, however, held fairly we during the session, and utilities wer under very little pressure.

Week-end business reports, ind cating that a spring pickup was fina ly under way in a number of line viewed hopefully in Wall Stree There was a tendency, however, t await further clarification of Wash ington plans of many vital economi subjects.

Wall Street expects that the ad ministration's railroad program wil include plans for a national coordinator, assisted by regional coordinators, to unify operations, and eliminate wasteful duplication and competitive practices. Savings under such a plan are expected to be enormous.

Speculative interest in commodities was still keen. Cotton rallied 50 to 55 cents a bale, and wheat was firm during the earlier hours of trading.

Foreign exchanges moved rather narrowly. Sterling was up slightly, with cables closing at $3.42¼, up ⅛ of a cent. Among the principal gold currencies, the French franc and the Dutch guilder were up slightly, while the Swiss franc was steady. German marks sagged a few points.

County Taxpayers Held Meeting Friday

Representatives from Saugerties, New Paltz and Marlborough were present at the meeting of the Ulster County Taxpayers' League held at the Stuyvesant Hotel Thursday evening.

The members present endorsed the bill of Assemblyman Pratt, which would allow municipalities to reopen budgets and would affect mandatory laws as regards salaries.

Action was not unanimous on a resolution asking the legislature to defer action on the Mastic report regarding reorganization of county government until the present depression was ended, but the chairman declared the resolution carried.

It was also voted to write to the Department of Audit and Control of the State Comptroller's office and also to the District Attorney, asking what steps, if any, had been taken in regard to the audit made of the books of the county.

Members asked for more details in regard to the proposition of Herbert Sears that the county budget can be kept within $550,000. It was proposed to ask the supervisors to keep within that amount for next year, if possible.

There was some discussion of the present methods of selecting grand and trial jurors and a committee was named to investigate the matter.

Cambridge Wins Classic from Oxford

Putney-on-Thames, England, April 1 (AP).—Cambridge today won the 85th annual boat race from Oxford for its tenth straight victory setting a new competitive record for the century-old rivalry.

The light blues swept to victory by two and one-half lengths after leading from the mile and a half point.

Away first with a higher stroke Cambridge yielded the lead to the dark blues at the mile by a quarter length but regained all the lost ground in the next half mile and thereafter were always out in front.

At the three mile point they were a length to the good and from there to the finish line at Mortlake Brewery open water was showing between the two shells.

Dead Trooper to Get Military Funeral

Richfield Springs, N. Y., April 1 (AP).—Sergeant Walter A. Purcell of "G" Troop, State Police, fatally injured yesterday in an automobile accident near Scotia, will be given a military funeral Monday in this village where he was born. He was a World War veteran, having served in the famous Second (Indian Head) Division in France and Germany.

A trooper for nine years, the last few spent in the South Glens Falls outpost, Sergeant Purcell died of a broken neck yesterday as the result of an automobile accident while en route to East Avon for a mobilization of troopers on milk strike riots. Two others with him were injured, one critically.

No Drop in Retail Coal Prices Here

The usual drop in the retail price of coal on the first of April did not go into effect today, and it is understood that the local retail dealers are awaiting word from the mines as to whether there will be the usual drop in the wholesale prices. One local dealer stated today that he believed there would be a drop in the retail price here, but did not know just how soon it would occur.

"SENATOR" MURPHY IN ILL HEALTH TAKES HIS LIFE

Press dispatches announce the suicide in Danbury, Conn., Thursday, of Daniel Augustin Muhphy, who was well known in Kingston, having conducted cases in the courts here. The "Senator," as he was familiarly known, was a former member of the Connecticut General Assembly and was particularly proud of the fact that as a member of the Assembly's committee on education he started the public library at New Fairfield, Conn., in 1897. He had been in poor health in recent years. He last came to Kingston in April, 1932, leaving here for Saugerties October 25 of that year. Mr. Murphy had been admitted to practice in both the courts of New York state and Connecticut. Originally a Democrat in politics, for a number of years he had espoused Republican principles and was an ardent supporter of President Hoover during the last campaign.

Perfume Industry in Bermuda

An interesting fact in connection with the perfume industry in Bermuda is the fact that a number of years ago, a young English chemist conceived the idea of salvaging the scent of the lily blossoms, which are thrown away because the bulbs are considered more valuable. He worked at research and experimentation for four years, and finally solved the problem by employing the enfleurage method of extraction. The extraction plant has become a popular place for tourists.

Undated Quarters

The United States has never issued undated quarter-dollars. In the design of the "Liberty" quarter-dollars the date was so placed that it wore off easily, which is the reason why so many undated quarters are in circulation, and is also one reason why the design was recently changed.

An Old Hickory Apostle

A hickory tree grows over the grave of James Sayre, in Canton (Pa.) Baptist cemetery. Sayre was a great admirer of Andrew Jackson and in token of that fact always wore a sprig of a hickory tree in his buttonhole while alive.

Night Shift Struck At Silk Mill Here

Friday a delegation of the striking weavers from the Katterman & Mitchell silk mill at Port Jervis came to Kingston to induce the weavers at the company's silk mill on Cornell street to strike. As a result about 7:30 o'clock that evening about half of the night shift struck. The others worked for a while and later were informed that they need not finish out the shift.

Superintendent Emil G. Roessner stated that this morning the day shift were working as usual. What developments would occur Monday he was not prepared to say.

The wage scale here is about the same as at the Port Jervis plant with the workers averaging from $12 to $15 a week.

There are 35 employes on the night shift and the day shift numbers about 100.

There was no disorder at the plant Friday night nor today. On Saturdays the plant only works until noon. The police department had an officer at the plant Friday night and also this morning, but their services were not needed.

The company's plant at Port Jervis has been shut down several days owing to the strike there.

Russia Surrenders Trains to Manchukuo

Tokyo, April 1 (AP).—Japanese reports from Manchuria said today the Soviet government has surrendered 3,500 seized freight cars to Manchukuo.

The equipment, the report said, had been withdrawn illegally from the Chinese Eastern Railway which crosses Manchuria and is jointly operated by Manchukuo and Russia.

It was believed the return would tend to dissipate the latest dispute arising over the conduct of the railroad, long a point of issue between Japan and Russia after the Chinese were driven out of Manchuria.

Russia also has agreed to pay rental on the cars, the Japanese claimed.

Other points still remained in dispute, however. The Japanese claim to have information that the Soviet government also was making unauthorized shipments of war materials to Vladivostok.

The Chinese Eastern Railway was built by Russia as a short cut to Vladivostok and was jointly operated with China until Japanese occupation of Manchuria.

Two Men Are Charged With Chopping Tree

Stephen Wesslowski of 108 Murray street and Peter Banaskie of 32 Rondout street were arrested Friday on a warrant sworn out by Henry Hefner, charging both men with malicious mischief in chopping down a tree on the Gross estate without permission. This morning the hearing in both cases was adjourned to Tuesday.

Following a collision between cars driven by Paul Kaman, Jr., of 184 Hurley avenue and John Schbelski of 92 Ann street, at Hasbrouck avenue and Murray street on Friday, both drivers arrested each other on charges of reckless driving. The hearing in both cases was adjourned to Monday. Both cars were somewhat damaged, but no one was injured.

Albert Canine, a negro of 143½ Foxhall avenue, arrested for public intoxication on Flatbush avenue, was fined $5.

Senate Committee Reports on Boxing

Albany, N. Y., April 1 (AP).—The Nunan bill, putting amateur boxing and wrestling shows under the jurisdiction of the State Athletic Commission, was reported favorably today by the senate finance committee.

The bill defines an amateur as one who boxes or wrestles in exhibitions where no cash prizes are awarded and where the prize competed for is worth no more than $35.

The bill is sponsored by Senator Joseph D. Nunan, Jr., Queens Democrat.

ARBUCKLE MANAGER KNOWS HOW TO SELL GOOD COFFEE

That newspaper advertising will be a dominant force in business recovery is the opinion expressed today by C. King Woodbridge of Arbuckle Brothers, New York, producers of Seven Day and other well-known brands of coffee.

"Under present day economic conditions," states Mr. Woodbridge, a former president of the International Advertising Association, "two things are apparent. First, this is no time to speculate on advertising by using mediums of doubtful effectiveness. Second, a close balance must be maintained between current income and current expense. Advertising and selling costs should be paid for out of current sales—and not charged tomorrow's hopes. When, several months ago—following the remarkable success we have had in introducing Seven Day Coffee—we decided to advertise this brand, there was no question among our executives as to what medium should be used. We decided to make it a 100 per cent newspaper campaign."

The Green and Gold Charity Ball, an event of Easter Monday evening sponsored by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Benedictine Hospital, at the new armory will undoubtedly be a lovely affair as the decorations designed by Mrs. James E. Draperies in green and gold will be suspended from the beamed ceiling while forsythia, the earliest spring blossom in gold color, will be used in abundance. Sprays of larger gay blossoms will spring from the sides intermingled with huge green baskets filled with forsythia blending in beautifully with the terra cotta hue of the walls. The charity ball of the Benedictine Auxiliary has long been noted for the beauty of its decorative scheme, and this year the new armory will indeed present a pretty picture on that evening when the doors swing wide to welcome the many expected guests of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

KINGSTON, N. Y., APRIL 1, 1933.

The straightforward statement in The Freeman Friday evening by Vincent A. Gorman, certified to by the conservator in charge of the National Ulster County Bank and Trust Company, places certain malicious liars in Kingston in the unenviable position of criminals convicted, at least by public opinion. At a time of stress and uncertainty these persons have invented and circulated damaging and untruthful reports, designed and intended to injure the trade and financial standing of a reputable business house, further harm an embarrassed banking institution and bring added worry to the depositors on behalf of whose interests every effort is being made by a competent conservator appointed by and acting for the United States government. No motive except the "general cussedness" and ever-present desire to tear down others, innate in their warped minds, can be assigned for the invention and circulation of those falsehoods by the mental and moral hyenas responsible. The welfare of thousands of depositors in the bank and the consequent welfare of the community as a whole is involved in the matter of straightening out the affairs of the bank to the best advantage of its creditors, and all honest and intelligent citizens recognize this fact and the additional fact that only a fool or a scoundrel will make matters worse by the circulating of false and harmful reports. The law provides a punishment for the guilty ones and they should be sought out and given their just desserts. The Freeman has little hope that this will be done, as the law seldom concerns itself with skunks.

NEW WORLD

The world has seemed to be going to pieces lately. But one of the most luminous of American thinkers and writers, Walter Lippmann, talking to students at the University of California, is reassuring. "This trouble you see about you," he tells them, "is not the end of the world, but merely the end of folly, miscalculation and stupidity." The old order of human affairs is gone irrevocably, he thinks. And it was due to go. The life our young people are now entering is not aimless.

"In the new order, the loose, individualistic and acquisitive democracy of the nineteenth century will be replaced by a much more highly integrated, socially conscious form of government." We are passing out of the era when peace rested precariously upon a balance of power instead of being organized; when economic activity was regulated not by intelligent plan, but by supply and demand operating blindly through rising and falling prices; when men, seeking to make too much of their selfish opportunities, wrecked their opportunities.

The new era, he suggests, instead of being characterized by combative self-interest, will be directed by "benevolent intelligence." And do we enter this era right away, or wait till after the next economic smash? Or the one after that?

The stock market started off strong after the bank moratorium, then fell back a little and has been bumping along lately at about the same low level. Why don't stocks rise, when four-fifths of the country's banks are operating again and business sentiment has improved? There is a great gain in public confidence, and the stock market usually outruns actual business conditions, whether on the way up or down. Two facts explain the static market. One is the continued stream of securities pouring in for liquidation from closed banks, investment trusts and insurance companies and from individual owners forced to sacrifice. The other fact is that banks since 1929, and especially since a certain recent inaugural address, are wary of lending money for stock speculation.

Traffic violators in Cleveland, waiting in line to pay fines at the traffic bureau in the police station, are provided with reading matter which is likely to interest them greatly. It is a record of automobile fatalities in that community from 1925 up to the current month. The figures are in bright red ink. The list is posted just to the left of the window marked "pay here." It is to be hoped that fine-payers, pausing to read may go away thinking soberly about the situation and their own responsibility. If they are paying fines for speeding, crashing lights, disregarding traffic regulations, it is their good luck, not their good sense, which has saved them from adding to that fatality list.

Wrong Roads to Rest

This sixth verse is lovely music and has often deeply moved the weary by the singing of it, for it voices the quenchless longing of our own spirits. Jerusalem seems to have been as full of lawlessness and crime as some modern cities and the Psalmist, weary of it all, wanted to get away from it. A most natural desire but not the right way out. If wings are to be used to fly away from difficult situations, it is just as well we have none.

When things are wrong somebody must stay and help make them right. Cities are saved from violence not by men with dove's wings who fly to the wilderness, but by people with courage and wisdom who stay where evil is and fight it and end it. Rest is always the reward of action. It has to be won and we do not win it by dodging the difficult. There is no rest in the wilderness anywhere else for the person who has left behind an unfulfilled duty or made trouble an excuse for escape.

Prayer: O Thou Who knowest how we are weary and heavy laden and hast promised us rest, grant unto us the rest which belongs only to those who bear the heat and burden of the day, the peace of those who spend themselves for the peace of others. Forgive us all our foolish flights from what we can not leave behind and enable us to find our peace in Thy will. In His name Who sought no escape from a troubled world and healed it by His own weariness. Amen.

SUNDAY, APRIL 2

(Read Psalm 65:9-13)

God's Goodness to the Earth

The devoutly sensitive have always found the revelation of Divine power and kindness in nature. God is good even to the earth. He visited it, the Psalmist said, in seasonable rains. He crowned the years with goodness, girdled the hills with joy. This constancy of God in nature should both make us grateful and instruct us. It is so blessed, so unfailing, so healing.

The literature of the World War occasionally notes with surprise how Spring came unarrested and the meadow-lark sang over the trenches. And when the War was over, growing things came back to the scarred earth to make it right and clean again. This last Summer nature took no account of our depression. God visited the earth and the beauty and the harvests of it were paths, as always, along which to follow His goodness. And now, again, His vernal beauty begins to renew our world. If God is good to the earth, so ought we to be. The lands we till and live in reveal not only the spirit of the Divine but also some quality of our spirits. A land may grow more gracious and beautiful through being long lived in, and loved or else more barren through our abuse of it.

Prayer: Lord of the clouds and sunlight, whose kindness takes account of thirsty fields and Who crownest the year with Thy goodness, we thank Thee for every revelation of Thy love in the beauty and fruitfulness of the earth. Endow us, we pray Thee, with a concern like Thine for our Mother the Earth. Forgive us for our sins against field and forest and may the land we live in reflect in the beauty of it Thine image in our natures. In His name for Whom even the flowers blossomed out of Thy love. Amen.

VALIANT DUST

by Percival Christopher Wren Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Lurking about the ancient Moorish Citadel of Mekanzen was treachery to France. But it suddenly was ended by Colonel Le Sage of the Secret Service with death for the Kaid of Mekanzen, death for Jules Maligni, Margaret Maligni's tricky husband, and capture for Major Riccoli of the Foreign Legion, the worst traitor of all. Margaret is awakened by the sly entrance of Raisul, son of the Kaid. Raisul swears that unless Margaret yields to him he will torture and kill Margaret's girlhood sweetheart, Otho Bellême, who is in the Citadel as a private in Riccoli's command. Margaret is on the point of yielding.

Chapter 48

THE DUEL

RAISUL laughed merrily. He was amused.

"No, no, no! This won't do at all. You've got to kiss me. I'm not going to do all the kissing, maddeningly, thrillingly wonderful as it is. What the devil are you staring at?"

Turning about, Raisul followed Margaret's incredulous hypnotised gaze, and lithe and swift as a springing panther, leapt to his feet.

Otho!

"Ah!" said Otho Bellême, with a sound of unfathomable satisfaction. "Raisul ben Abd' allah Karim."

Without taking his eyes from those of his adversary, Raisul bent sideways to the low table on which he had laid his long dagger, drew it from its sheath, and advanced, poised and crouching.

With a laugh that belied the look upon his face.

"Another visitor, Margaret!" he said. "Very much 'at home' tonight, aren't you? I'm afraid I've overstayed my . . ."

"Steel or bare hands?" interrupted Otho Bellême as he drew his bayonet.

"W-e-l-l," replied Raisul, circling sideways and yet advancing as he spoke. "I think we'll give the lady a dagger-versus-bayonet exhibition, eh? Bit fairer perhaps, what? Personally I'm not a professional bruiser."

"Right," replied Otho Bellême, holding the long thin bayonet before him, like a foil.

This ought to be a good fight, and with Margaret looking on. But he must go warily, for he must win—for Margaret's sake, as well as for his own.

Here was he, Otho Bellême, in Margaret's room.

In a state of absolute funk and horror he had slid down a few feet of rope that dangled over hundreds of feet of sheer drop—in pursuit of that devil. And he was in Margaret's room.

Raisul sprang, and stabbed: Otho lunged and thrust, and his left hand seized Raisul's wrist, as Raisul skillfully evaded the swift blade, and in turn, seized Otho's right wrist.

Breast to breast. Stale-mate.

Yes, yes! the dagger-hand was slowly going back, back, while the hand that held the bayonet moved not at all.

Suddenly Raisul threw the whole of his weight violently forward and, mightily twisting his arm, sprang backward, releasing Otho's wrist as he did so.

Round one, and honors easy.

Otho sprang and drove a lightning thrust at Raisul's throat.

With equal swiftness, Raisul ducked beneath the lean sharp blade, and simultaneously slashed upward with the terrible disembowelling stroke, which will lay a man open from thigh to breast-bone.

Well for Otho Bellême that, albeit a heavyweight, he was one of the quickest boxers of the day.

Striking swiftly downwards and sideways with lightning speed and all his strength, his left fist encountered Raisul's wrist with such force, that, as he whirled sideways, the knife fell from his hand, and clattered on the stone floor.

Disarmed, Raisul backed away from the gleaming bayonet that in an instant would be through his throat or his heart.

Setting his foot upon the knife, Otho spoke.

"There was a time when I should have told you to pick that up," he said. "I'm not quite the fool I was, but . . ."

And Otho sheathed his bayonet.

"Put up your fists," he said, "and fight any way you can. I can't stab you in cold blood."

Raisul backed, backed into the corner, stooped and rose in one swift movement—Margaret's pistol in his hand, and levelled. At Margaret.

Bang!

At Otho.

Click.

Margaret screamed, and Otho turned his head. Her hand was pressed to her breast.

A crashing blow in the face, as the flung pistol struck him, and his hands closed about Raisul's throat.

Jove! but the fellow was strong—and agile as a cat; slippery as an eel.

Free again.

Raisul ducked beneath it, and flung his arms about Otho's waist.

Down together.

A cry from Margaret.

"The knife, Otho! The knife!"

By Jove, he'd got it. Raisul leapt to his feet, and stabbed.

Otho, rising, struck with his right. The blow sent him staggering backward.

As he brought up against the wall beside the balcony, his arm shot forward as he flung his knife—too hurriedly.

Again Otho struck, and as Raisul side-stepped to his left, Otho smashed home a crashing right that drove Raisul heavily against the low balcony wall.

With a loud cry he threw out his arms, clutched wildly at the rope, and before Otho could seize him, fell backward across the coping, turning and turning in mid-air, to strike the jackal-haunted rocks beside the shattered body of his victim, Jules Maligni.

After a hasty instinctive glance over the balcony at the still falling body, Otho whirled about, to find Margaret running to him with outstretched arms.

"'Tho darling. Oh, 'Tho."

"Are you hit? Are you hurt?" cried Otho.

"No, no," laughed Margaret shakily. "Oh, darling, I thought I was, and I'm not. I thought I was dead, and I did want to live long enough to see you kill him."

Her arms were round his neck. He was holding her tightly to him, and stroking her hair.

Neither ever knew how the next minutes passed. At length,

"Otho, it's incredible. It's too wonderful. Oh, 'Tho, why did you go and leave me? Why did you join this awful Foreign Legion?"

"Didn't you know? Why, so as to come down that rope at the psychological moment. Obvious, isn't it?"

Again they kissed.

"Oh, Margaret, I love you so utterly. Do you know I have never lain down to sleep without thinking of you—since I was a boy."

They clung together, then sprang apart as heavy blows sounded on the door.

Drawing the bolts, Otho saw the aged slave who had guided them to the battlements. Seizing Otho's arm, Hassan el Miskeen dragged him across the room, and out on to the balcony. Looking upwards, Otho saw several heads silhouetted against the sky, as their owners craned through the embrasures.

"Ohé, Bellême, was that Raisul?" called Le Sage.

"Yes, sir. He's—er—on the rocks." Le Sage laughed grimly.

"Come up," he called. "I've sent the guide for you."

Motioning to Hassan to lead on, Otho kissed Margaret once again.

"Wait for me, Margaret," he said. "Wait for me."

Yes, she would wait for him. She would wait a lifetime for him.

In the absence of the Kaid, Raisul, Mahommed Ali el Amin, and every other leader or executive authority, the organization of the Citadel of Mekanzen went to pieces; what should have been the garrison of Moorish soldiers became an armed rabble (quickly disarmed); and the castle fell of itself. The loosely knit native life of the citadel swiftly disintegrated, and the work begun by the betrayal of the pass-word was completed by the issuance of orders and instructions in the Kaid's name, by the Kaid's Vizier, the Señor Pedro Maligni.

Until the tricolor flew at the mast-head on the Sultan Tower, and Colonel Le Sage was in fact Governor of the Castle, the orders of the Vizier were accepted and obeyed, for want of better.

"The longer we can conceal the fact of the deaths of the Kaid and Raisul, the longer we can use your authority as Vizier," said Le Sage. "Not that we shall need that for long, Señor Maligni."

"And the other half of the reward, promised me after the consummation of your work here?"

"It shall be paid to you personally, at Tangier, as soon as possible after I receive a letter from your daughter-in-law—in her own handwriting — from Yelverbury. The sooner she gets there the sooner you will get the other fifteen pieces."

"Fifteen pieces, Colonel?"

"Oh, I beg your pardon, Señor Maligni. I was thinking of 'thirty pieces of silver.'"

Migrating from pole to pole to follow the sunlight, the tern lives in light. When the long summer ends at the north pole and the sun sets to remain below the horizon until the following year, the tern flies south with the sun to the antarctic where it enjoys another season of sunlight in the long day of the south pole.

It makes the 11,000-mile trip with the seasons twice a year—a straight line distance of 22,000 miles. During the trips from pole to pole the tern, of course, runs into darkness on the way, but a very small part of its life is spent in darkness.

Demonstrating the operation of the economic law of supply and demand, the price of phenolphthalein, a chemical reagent used to some extent in medicine, jumped from 80 cents a pound in 1914 to $48 a pound in the United States a year later. The advent of the World War cut off the supply from Germany and, with no adequate supply available in this country, the steady demand skyrocketed the price.

The phenomena of the shedding rock of Cape Barne is explained by the expansion of rock when warmed by the sun. During the antarctic night the rock cools and contracts, but with the rising sun the resultant expansion on the rough surface breaks off small pieces which fall to the earth.

Tribute Paid to Two Lodge Members

On Tuesday evening, Kingston Lodge, No. 10, F. and A. M., met in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the membership of George E. Fisher and the Hon. A. T. Clearwater. A large gathering of the members was present and guests came from many parts of the state and also a large delegation arrived from New Jersey, where Mr. Fisher now makes his home. John E. Kraft made the presentation speech, having been introduced by George B. Styles, chairman of the entertainment committee. During the course of the evening music was furnished by Paul Zucca and chorus singing was enjoyed by all. At the completion of the ceremonies refreshments were served.

Roger H. Loughran was the speaker of the evening and paid eloquent tribute to the two brothers of the lodge who were celebrating their golden anniversary in Masonry.

He said in part: George E. Fisher was born in Brooklyn in 1856. When he was five years old his parents moved to the more salubrious climate of Kingston, which without doubt accounts in great measure for his presence with us this evening, carrying lightly his weight of more than three score years and ten. His boyhood was spent here and at the age of 22 he accepted a position as fireman with the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. It was not long before his qualities advanced him to the place of engineer on the run between Springfield and New Haven. In 1882 the New York, West Shore and Buffalo Railroad had just finished building the line from Weehawken as far as Kingston, and having heard of Mr. Fisher, requested him to come into their family. He was accordingly placed in charge as master of the round house at Kingston and also, as locomotive engineer, had the distinction of driving the engine on the West Shore Railroad that drew the first steam passenger train into the city of Kingston. It was shortly after his return to Kingston that Fisher became a member of Kingston Lodge, No. 10. He has always been of a kindly nature and it is still told of him that, though others in charge of the round house, might have been short in dismissing boys who wished to play about the place, he, with customary good humor, told them they might come into the round house and play, provided they were quiet about it and careful not to get hurt. In 1926, at the age of 70, Brother Fisher retired from the service of the West Shore.

As to Brother Clearwater, what can I say that we do not know already? We know him, we respect him, we honor him and are friends of his. By a life of service to this community he has become so endeared and familiar to us that when we think of Kingston, or even Ulster county, we involuntarily think of Judge Clearwater. But, it is not only in Kingston and Ulster county that he is known and respected. He has traveled in foreign countries; he has worked and received master's wages; he is a man of letters, a statesman and a lawyer of rare ability. He has honored the Bench as both County Judge of Ulster county and as Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of New York. Born at West Point in 1848 and admitted to the Bar in 1871, he was elected district attorney of Ulster county in 1877. Eloquent, forceful and exceptionally well informed, Judge Clearwater has become widely known as a public speaker. He was chairman of the commission for the 1927 celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of the government of the State of New York at Kingston, July 30, 1777; has been president of the St. Nicholas Society of New York, of the Holland Society, a trustee of Rutgers College, president of the Ulster County Historical Society, of the Senate House Association of Kingston and of both the Ulster County and New York State Bar Associations. In the midst of his busy life the Judge has found time for social amenities and has been president of the Twaalfskill Country Club and is a member of the Kingston Club, the Union, Union League, Century and Grolier Clubs of New York city. He has also indulged his hobby of collecting early American silver and is the owner of one of the most complete and interesting collections of such pieces in the world. A collection of his is at present at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which institution the Judge is an honorary fellow for life. The collection is so important that a special wing of the building has been set aside for its display.

He has been appointed by successive Governors of the State of New York a member of the State Reservation Commission at Niagara Falls, and has been the president of that commission for the last 14 years. Also, he has been appointed by successive Governors a member of the State Probation Commission and has been the vice president of that commission for many years. He was selected and is still acting as the chairman of the Kingston Washington Bi-Centennial Celebration Committee and it is understood is arranging for the erection of a suitable memorial commemorating Washington's visit to Kingston in November, 1782.

The Judge started his public life at an early age and it is told that when he was a boy, at the time of the War of the Rebellion, his grandfather, Captain Thomas Clearwater, being one of the founders of the Ulster County Bible Society (of which the Judge later became president), arranged for the presentation to each private soldier who went to the front of a leather bound copy of the New Testament and Psalms, and the Judge, then in his early teens, was appointed to present the books. Among his early memories he sees himself passing down between lines of soldiers, followed by two colored men carrying huge baskets filled with the small volumes, presenting a copy to each one of the soldiers. After the close of the war many a grizzled veteran stopped at the Judge's office and showed him the well thumbed booklet which had afforded him much solace during the troubled days and nights. On two occasions these testaments saved the soldier's life by stopping bullets.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

BY

James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act)

BEING YOUR BEST SELF

One of the reasons Gene Tunney gave up his heavyweight boxing championship was because he wanted to feel that he was always Gene Tunney, and Gene Tunney at his best.

One of his sparring partners, a former amateur champion, records that there were a couple of days during Tunney's training when Tunney was not himself. He seemed irritable when not boxing and almost vicious when he was boxing. After these two days he was his old genial self again.

Tunney said on the day he became normal again that he had no recollection of the previous two days nor of anything that happened. These two days were a complete blank in his life.

Just what caused this loss of memory—a blow, or passing infection—he could not tell, but he never wanted to have a similar experience.

In one sense this is not an unusual condition and explains some of the queer actions at times of practically every one of us.

Dr. A. W. Hackfeld, Zurich, Switzerland, has reviewed cases that show that some derangement of the ordinary processes of the body such as digestion and the accumulation of sugar in the blood, has been followed by some pronounced mental changes.

Further, he shows that with the clearing up or improvement of the mental processes, the ordinary processes—digestion, circulation, and so forth—again become more nearly normal.

In other words the body can affect the mind and the mind affect the body because, as mentioned before, you are only one, not two persons.

Usually these conditions clear up and the individual becomes normal.

Where the condition continues and becomes chronic, hallucinations and delusions or both may persist, and the individual goes down hill mentally, although the physical processes may be normal or nearly normal.

The thought then is that your body needs training just as does your mind; training that means common sense daily habits.

Also everyone of us needs to cultivate a calmness or poise that will be reflected by a normal working of the body processes.

Cleveland's War on Dogs

By August 22, 1866, the city council was beset with complaints and demands for action, recounts the Cleveland Plain Dealer. The canine population was getting the best of the authorities. The marshal started a wholesale round-up. Every dog without a collar disappeared from circulation. Farmers were warned to keep their dogs in their wagons. On many occasions they came to town with several dogs and went home with none.

OFFICE CAT

By Junius

April Fool comes but once a year; the other kind come every day.

First Young Man—I'm going to marry a girl who is a good cook and also a good housekeeper.
Second Young Man—You can't. They'll get you for bigamy.

We used to hang horse thieves, but the auto bandit usually run into something and kill themselves before the sheriff can catch up with them.

It takes 500 bolts and nuts to make a modern automobile. But it takes only one nut to wreck it.

Burp took his Aunt out riding,
Though icy was the breeze.
He put her in the rumble seat
To see his anti-freeze.

After being scolded by her mother for letting the boy friend kiss her in the parlor, the daughter replied: "Well, mother dear, it's too blamed cold to sit out in the car."

A statistical hound reports that the time Americans spend each day waiting for red lights to turn green amounts to 35 years. Yes, and if you are in a hurry it seems longer than that.

Among other things that are not what they used to be is All Fools' Day.

A hypocrite is a man who prays for delivery from temptation, then slips out to the automobile show.

Joe—Do you think that airplanes will ever supplant automobiles?
Sue—No. Who would want to park in a damp old cloud?

A pedestrian may have the right of way, but he usually shows pretty good judgment when he doesn't insist on it.

And to think that the scrap iron that once littered our alleys and vacant lots can now be seen rolling along the highways!

England kills three times as many people per car as the United States, but the island is small and the pedestrian has less opportunity to dodge.

Did you ever think what a good location a railroad crossing would be for a junk dealer?

Then there was the absent minded motorist who changed his oil every day—and his shirt every 500 miles.

Eventually every married man learns to look at the gasoline register before he backs the car out of the garage.

Alcohol may keep a radiator from freezing but it will not do as much for a man.

The only thing that does not get out of order on an automobile is the running board.

The invention of the automobile undoubtedly added a great deal to the cost of living, but not any more than the invention of the mirror.

First College Fraternity

The first American college fraternity of which there is record was organized at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., in 1730. It was known as the Flat Hat club. It was secret, literary and social, and existed until 1772. Thomas Jefferson and Edmund Randolph were members.

The magician shows you an empty tub. Examine it inside . . . outside . . . it looks perfectly normal!

What's this? Rabbits, radishes, babies, bouquets, carrots, cabbages . . . where did they come from?

Now give the inside of the tub a close examination. It has a clever false bottom where all the interesting rabbits and vegetables hide.

Nearly Always "Moving Day," But She Finds Time To Write

Slender starry-eyed young woman with blond-gold hair is not the conventional idea of a description for a successful writer of adventure and mystery thrillers, but it fits Mignon G. Eberhart. Her latest story, "The White Cockatoo," will appear in The Freeman, beginning Monday, April 3.

Mrs. Eberhart (her husband is a civil engineer) has the unique distinction of having sold every story she ever wrote. Her first novelette was hidden, unseen and unread, for two years before she gathered enough courage to submit it to a publisher. It was accepted immediately, to be followed by half a dozen stories and novels.

A native of Lincoln, Neb., Mrs. Eberhart is the daughter of W. T. Good. Three years at Nebraska Wesleyan University were followed by a special library course, then marriage.

Although her novels are distinguished for masterful suspense and vivid exciting action, Mrs. Eberhart insists on maintaining a respectful distance from everything but the calm and placid life. Pistols are familiar weapons in the hands of her characters, but a paper bag exploded behind the author produces a realistic hop, step and jump from the scene.

MIGNON G. EBERHART

Chicago, the Eberharts are almost constantly "on the move" to meet the nomadic demands of the engineering profession. But whether she is at her apartment or in a construction camp, Mrs. Eberhart writes.

"The White Cockatoo" is a story of adventure, mystery and romance. Its setting is a sinister summer resort hotel in an obscure French town. A cleverly-contrived plot brings the actors in this drama together in the middle of the winter, almost cut off from the outside world, practicing their hates and intrigues on each other.

The fast-moving novel, "The White Cockatoo" will bring you daily thrills and exciting episodes. Watch for it beginning Monday, April 3.

THE SCHOOL CHILD'S LUNCH

Milk.

Milk in some form, at least a cupful, should always be included in the lunch to make up the quart a day each boy and girl should have, says the Consumers Information Service of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Without milk a lunch is likely to contain too much starch and too much sweet. Milk is "the most nearly perfect food" and is essential to the health of children.

Keep the milk cold until lunch time by use of a small thermos bottle. On cold days warm milk, a milk soup, or cocoa (not too sweet or too strong with cocoa), add a warm food which aids the digestion and makes the rest of the lunch more palatable. Milk may also be used in the form of cup custards and similar desserts, and cottage cheese.

Card Party a Success

The card party held in Firemen's Hall, Rosendale, March 27 proved successful both from a financial and social viewpoint. The ladies in charge wish to thank all those who helped make this event so successful by their patronage, the loaning of tables, donations of prizes and cakes. This event was a benefit for the Benedictine Hospital.

"April Fooling" of Consumer Prevented by Regulations

Commissioner Baldwin Tells How Department of Agriculture and Markets Originated

By CHARLES H. BALDWIN
Commissioner, Department of Agriculture and Markets, Albany, New York

APRIL FOOL'S DAY has gone for the New York State consumer of foods from the farm.

Once it used to be that every month was April and every day the first. In fact the present Department of Agriculture and Markets had its beginning in an effort to protect New York State consumers from this constant "April fooling."

Butter happened to be the product which may be said to have started the Department. For some time it was known that a large part of the "butter" being sold in New York contained other fat than butter fat and hence was not really butter, and that much of the milk sold was skimmed or came from the pump. So in 1884, in an effort to correct this situation, there was organized the State Dairy Department which sought to protect New York's consumers in their purchases of all dairy products. New York's protective food laws are models throughout the country.

Nobody likes to be fooled in the matter of foodstuffs, and in many cases, if such "fooling" were permitted to continue unchecked, the very health of our citizens would be seriously affected. In the case of butter, for example, doctors tell us that the butter fat is more highly digestible than any other fat, and so our New York State law provides specifically that nothing may be sold as butter unless it actually contains no fat but butter fat. There is nothing to prevent anyone who so desires from buying oleomargarine, for example, but, under the law, it must be plainly labelled as such.

Our egg grading law is a tremendous step forward in the matter of protecting the consumer. In former days it was by no means unusual for a purchaser of a dozen eggs to find two or three bad and some modified. He had no recourse then, but now, if the purchaser finds a single "bad" egg in his purchase, he may bring the seller sharply to account. Fresh eggs are fresh eggs these days in New York State—otherwise the dealer may find himself called upon to pay a penalty fixed in the statute.

Under the law there can be no more "stove-pipe" packages of apples—barrels containing fine, large fruit at both ends but filled in the middle with anything the packer might have on hand. Grapes are specified definitely in the law and must be definitely stated on all closed packages. Grapes must also be graded as to quality according to law and every package, large and small, labelled to indicate whether they are eating or juice grapes, their grade and the name and address of the packer. Even cheese now must be marked if it is made with skim-milk, for example, or if it contains other kinds of fat than butter fat.

State and city sealers of weights and measures are constantly roaming their territory, checking up on all scales, pumps, weights and measures of every kind for the protection of the buying public. Every package of foodstuff must be plainly labelled showing the exact quantity, weight or measure of its contents. As a result of these wise regulations, April Fool's Day in New York is just an annual children's frolic now, not a continual all-year round threat to the consumer.

(This article is one of a series appearing in this paper in cooperation with the Consumers Information Service of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets.)

FEDERAL AGENTS VISITED ALLEGED STILL THURSDAY

Kingston prohibition office investigators seized what they said was a whiskey still in operation on the Frank Fabiano farm at Ulster Landing Thursday afternoon. Frank Fabiano and Louis Fabiano of Saugerties were arrested and arraigned before Commissioner A. F. Connelly this morning. They demanded a hearing and the case was adjourned to April 8, bail being fixed at $1,500 each. In addition to the still about 26 barrels of alleged cider and some 200 gallons of finished product were seized.

William Penn Buried in England

Sir William Penn died in England and was buried at Jourdan's meeting house, near Chalfont St. Giles in Buckinghamshire. An attempt was made to have his body brought to this country for burial in Philadelphia, but it met with failure.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—It's still worthy of Hollywood comment when a screen bogeyman throws off his ghostly wraps and steps out as a comedian.

Bela Lugosi was an actor of parts before he became "Dracula," but he has been the "vampire" ever since, and most of his screen roles have been only variations of his first major hit in pictures.

But for "International House" he has been cast in a strictly comedy part, as one of Peggy Hopkins Joyce's several ex-husbands. It's character comedy, and not slapstick, but for once he doesn't have to stalk around, frighten women and children, and make himself generally a terror.

"Eddie Sutherland, the director, seems to be the first to have considered me an actor instead of just 'Dracula,'" Lugosi remarks with a smile.

"I always was an actor. I played all kinds of parts before I played 'Dracula,' and I still am an actor.

"Nevertheless, I was surprised when Sutherland asked me about the role, because usually I don't get called for a picture unless it has a devil or a monster in it."

Lugosi is content to leave horror roles to other players who may want them and hopes this departure is the beginning of a new career for him in which he can qualify (in studio eyes as well as his own) for variety in roles.

In Hungary, where he was born, he points out, acting is a profession for which one is trained and acting is his profession. Acting confined within the limits of one type of role, he pleads, is no acting at all, and it is not for him.

"I have passed up many opportunities to play characters in exaggerated make-up," he says, "because I do not want to lose my identity as an actor. Besides, heavy make-up is most uncomfortable."

Despite his horror assignments, Lugosi admits no interest whatever in spooks, magic or the occult.

"Funny thing," he recalls, "I used to be intrigued by such things, but after 1,000 performances of 'Dracula' I lost interest. It was too much.

"That part on the stage was a real strain. Even though I knew it was all hokum—especially because I knew it—I had to throw all my force into playing it, and make myself believe it.

"That was the only way I could hold the audience. Whenever I let myself be mechanical in the role I lost the audience and the performance was a failure."

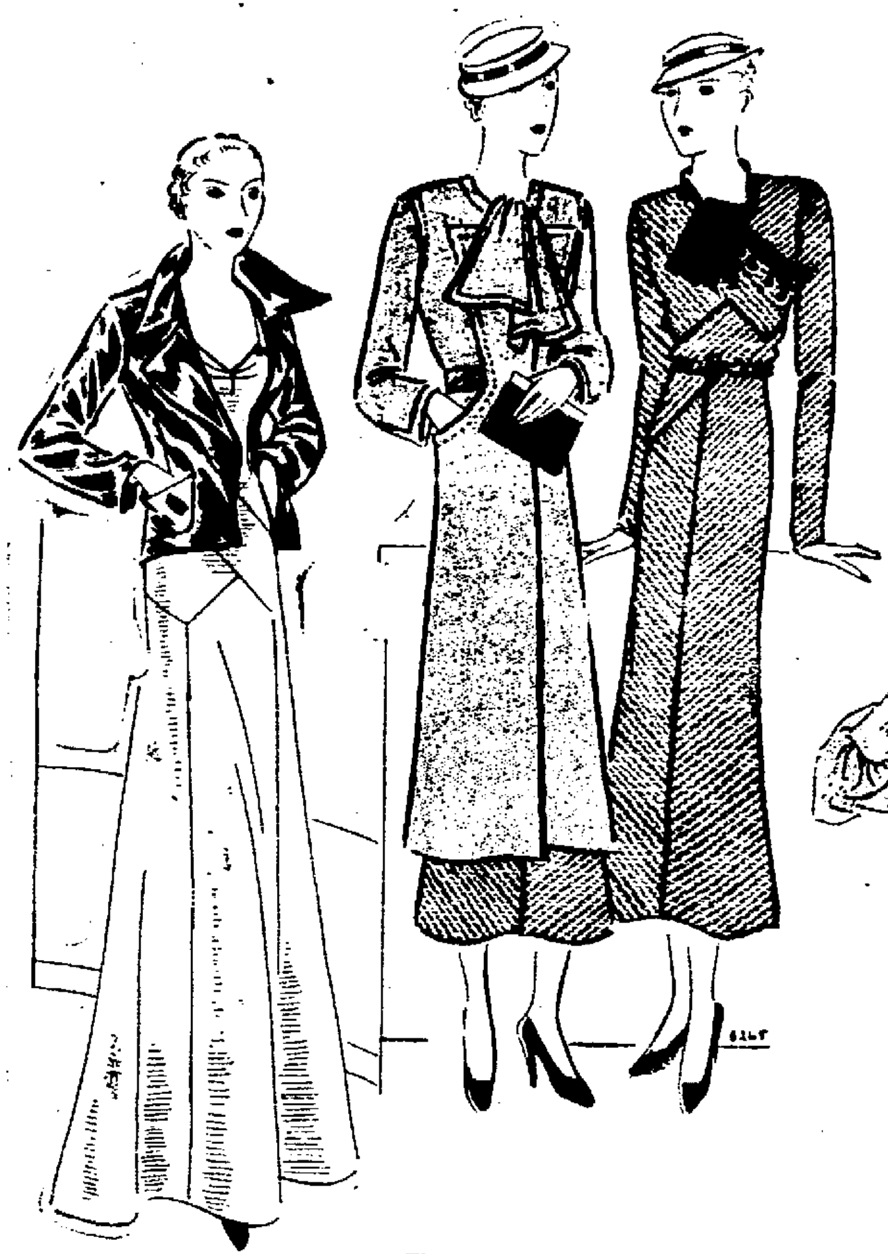
FASHIONS BY ELEANOR GUNN

A Reception Committee Dressed to Greet the Spring

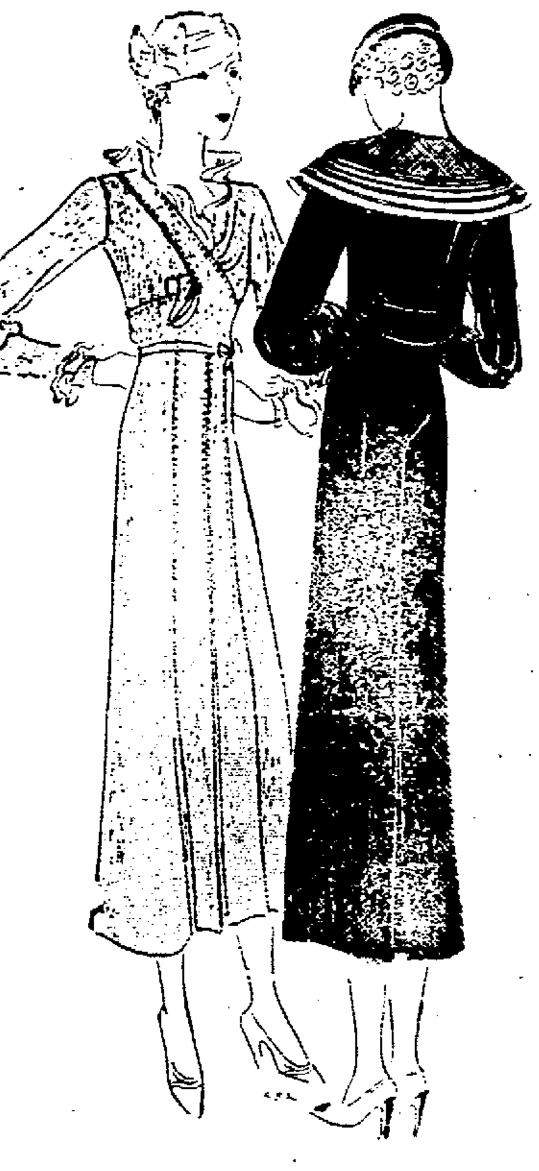


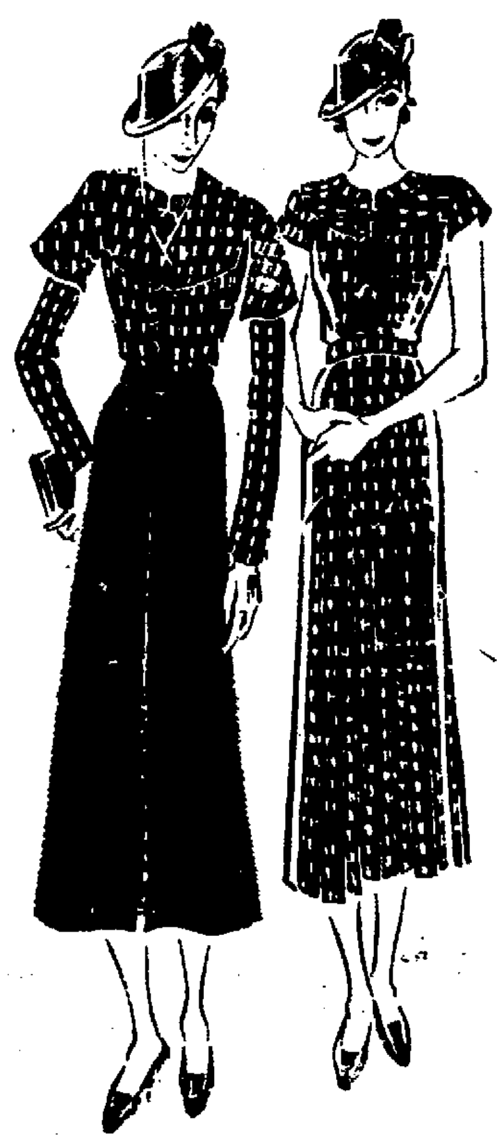
The much talked of masculine influence was apparent in a number of little evening jackets in the Paris collections. One of the most attractive was this one of heavy lacquered satin, in red, over a black or white gown.

The coat of the ensemble is of a grayish mixture, and it is worn over an equally neat street frock striped by white cord yards. Red buttons and red pique scarf collar give a touch of color, and the black cord belt fastens with metal and red leather. From Mirande.

Center panel—One of many neat little town frocks in the Chanel collection. The model sketched is of dark green silk crepon, with double ruffle of white organdie around the neck and at the wrists. It is worn with a tiny hat entirely of white organdie.

A navy wool voile with yarn stripe in it makes the dress, and white braid mounted on navy chiffon trims the collar. The tiny hat is likewise of the white braid and navy fabric. Chanel models.



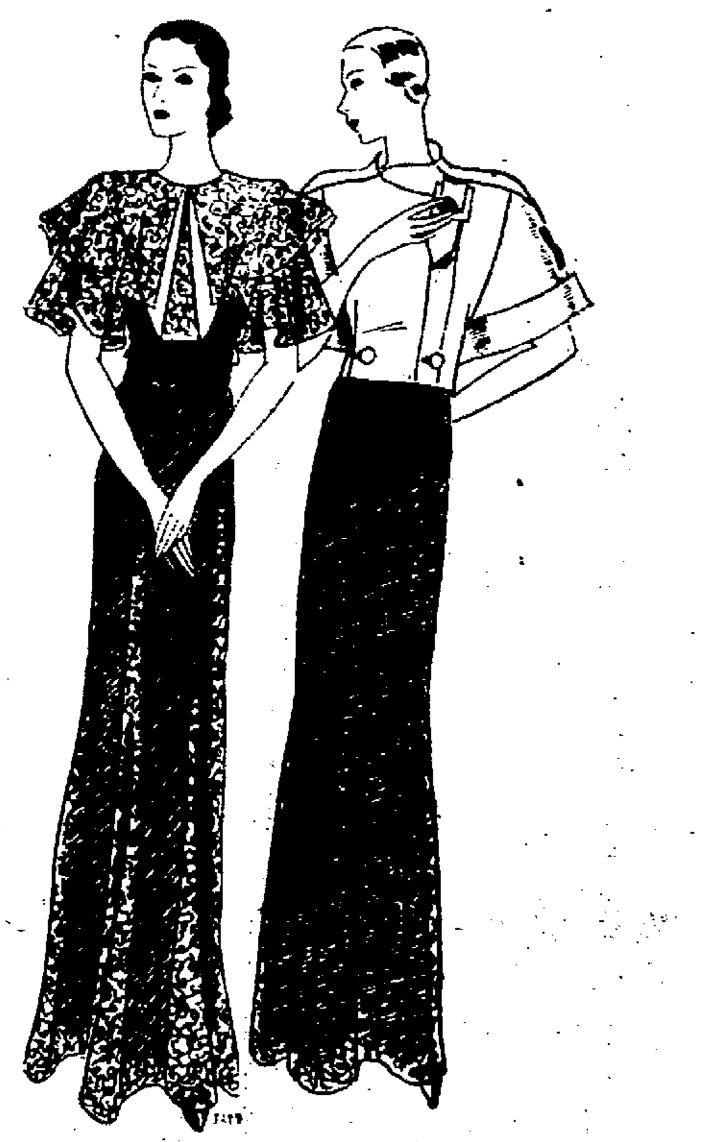


Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

At right, Mainbocher—Over a dress entirely of navy and white printed marocain, goes a coat partly of the same print and partly of a soft navy toile de laine with blue buttons.

Collarless necklines, pleated skirts in dresses, short dress sleeves and capelet sleeves for coats are all features of this showing, which is one of the most talked of in Paris.

Pique and Lace, a Sensational Merger



Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild.

At right is sketched a neatly tailored jacket of white pique designed to be worn, not with a sports costume, but with the accompanying evening dress of fine black lace, made with broad shoulder lines and built-up decollete. The satin belt is caught by a buckle of brilliants, and the pointed tabs at front are also of pique. From Lucien Lelong.

Wings of Celluloid

The feature of this hat is the small wings that fit down into the curls on the side of the head. The hat is made of a black fabric-like material and the wings are celluloid.

Graceful and Glamorous Gowns

New York—Whatever else might be said of the clothes in fashion since the war, they can hardly be said to have been graceful. Shirts short and scant may be smart, but they add little by way of grace.

The new skirts are longer. The longest of them have a lovely sweeping line that does a great deal for the average figure. Not that trailing skirts are advocated for street wear, quite the contrary, but they are advocated for evening, and when both long and reasonably full they are designed to be regarded as symbols of elegance and grace.

One of the most interesting of the several necklines is called the draped bateau. This is high and instead of being a straight or slightly curved line from shoulder to shoulder, there is a drapery across the front, so high as to hardly be called decollete were it not for the fact that such dresses frequently are very low in the back.

Some of the more extreme evening gowns are entirely backless, the shoulder straps, held around the back of the neck in what is called the necklace or collar effect and which is frequently jeweled. One very stately gown worn recently had two narrow panels falling from the back of the necklace over a back bared to the waist, the panels trailing six inches or more on the ground.

White still heads the list for evening and ranges from the dull sheer crepes to the new and varied organdies, both usually mounted over taffeta, and includes many other things as well, not forgetting satin.

Fringe adds materially to the flowing graceful lines which seem to characterize the newest evening gowns. Sparkling jewels or ornaments are best with white.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Vionnet's combination of deep violet and cyclamen is causing considerable discussion. This couturiere calls the violet shade "petunia."

Of the colors noted in the recent import collections, Schiaparelli's eel gray is especially interesting, already adopted in this market not only in coats but also in formal evening dresses and wraps. The light golden brown shades, or taffy tones, are also of note.

Broad shoulders, sometimes squared by the use of epaulets, continue their importance, with fulness in sleeves confined between the elbow and a dropped or drooped shoulder in nearly all models. Covered shoulders are the rule in practically all evening gowns though some have capelets or brief jackets, and one or two broaden the shoulder line with crisp or soft epaulets.

Bodices, too, command attention. Special mention must be made of the presence of vents, in triangular shapings, often posed just above the waistline, and often appearing in conjunction with bows that tie at the center back.

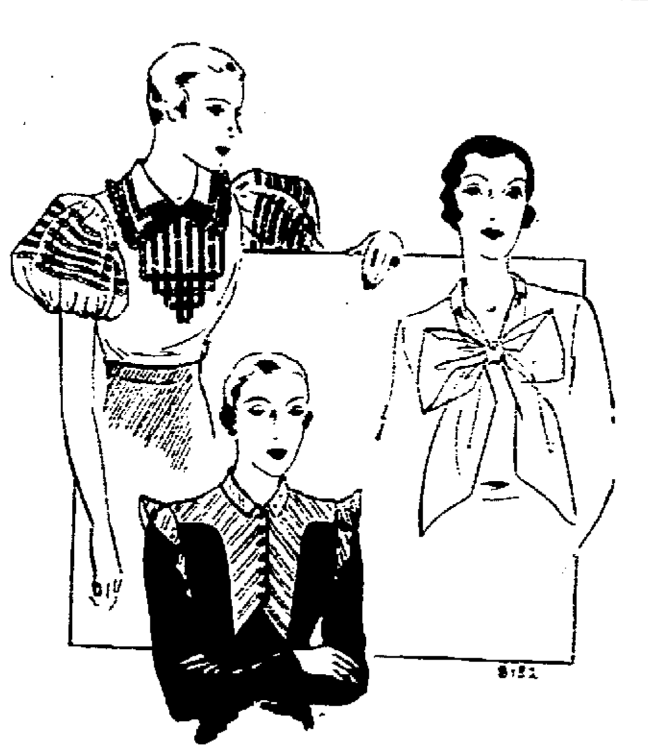
Organdie, embroidered in fine cross bar design or in bolder chenille effects, is a favorite formal fabric for dresses that are inspired by Chanel.

Jacket costumes for all occasions, the jackets in single and double-breasted expressions, with evening jackets introducing width in the sleeves and above the elbows, the fulness sometimes confined at the shoulders in tucks and pleats are good.

Evening decolletages are effective, sometimes in the Vionnet manner with effective twisted details that have a fresh appeal, and width at the shoulders continues important. Capes aid in giving this outline, often attached, and capes, too, are varied, since some hug the shoulders and others are stiffened and stand away.

Back fulness, in dresses, in pleats, shirrings and pointed sections; in jackets in a back-flaring line that gives a loose and easy silhouette.

Crisp, Whether Sheer or Sturdy



Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

Valenciennes lace, black cire bow and big puffy sleeves are features of the blousette at the left of the group. White georgette is the material. The bretelles in the center are of matelasse organdie with the "stripes" worked effectively: the yoke and bretelle and collar idea seems particularly fresh looking.

The huge bowknot and tiny collar at the right is made of white mousseline, a dainty and filmy adjustable type.

Evening Gowns Gay and Gala

No one can with any degree of honesty make a charge that evening dresses are in any way dull this season. Whereas a short time ago most of the fashion talk revolved around covered shoulders, width at the top and the inevitability of the little cape and jacket, now the discussion is much more animated, and there are many interesting things to talk about.

Surface decorations for one thing. They include tucks and shirrings and appliques are important, and flowers and feathers as trimmings are colorful, frothy and frivolous. Sashes that wind about, sometimes developing from the shoulders and giving a new twist to the decolletage are other means of gaining individuality, and decolletages that are square, oblong, V and bateau shaped are other factors lending distinction.

April's Follies and Foibles

New York—Looking for the newest vintage of fashions, the thought is bound to come that fashion has gone into reverse. The details that formerly went in the front of a gown, now go into the back of it. Instead of plain backs and elaborate facades, we have plain as pipe-stem front views and something going on behind one's back that is well worth turning around to see.

There are the rippling cascades that are often pleated and beginning at the centre back, ripple down to the hem. Fantails some call them. There are many back draperies and back treatments that tend to conjure up pictures of those rustling 80's back draperies, the sort of thing which made the family album such fun before they loomed again as a current fashion.

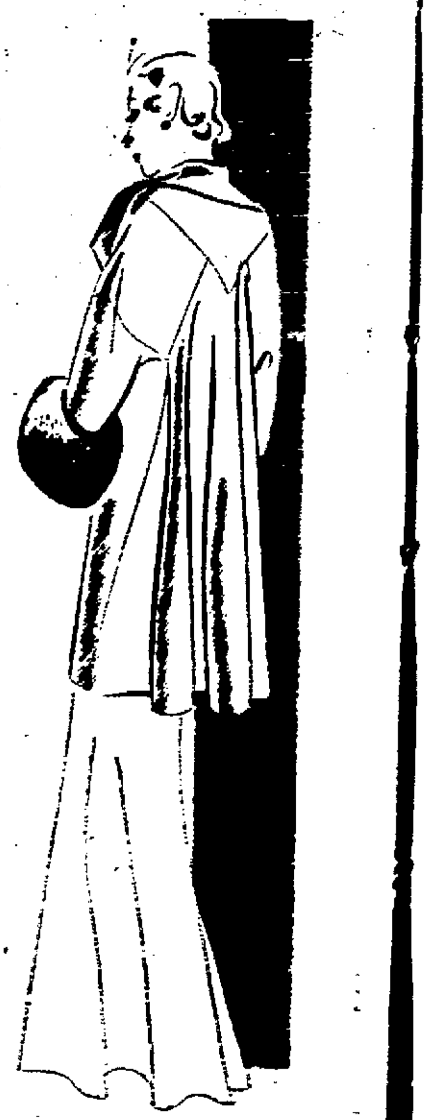
It now appears that it is the youngsters who like these dresses with those unexpected backs. Naturally, they have never had a chance to wear them before, but for that matter neither have the oldsters. Any one who is old enough to have worn such frocks when they were in vogue is entirely too old to hope for a backward glance.

There's the coat sketched for instance with its faint suggestion of Watteau minus his characteristic pleat. It represents one of the very newest lines and certainly shows how important it has become to keep one's back up to what's expected of it.

There are many instances where the fulness in either skirt or bodice is placed back instead of front. Pleats often are called into play, but sometimes it's a draped or ruffled treatment that gives the desired line.

It seems as though fashion was more than kind in the matter of evening wraps. They are so varied in texture and in line, that no one need suffer the old embarrassment of being caught with an antiquated evening wrap. They are now of any length and of any number of materials, collarless or with very snootie looking collars indeed.

NO FOOLIN', IT'S A COAT



Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

An evening wrap of lacquered pebbly crepe links the straight front with a loose swinging back. The cuffs are of blue fox, and the collar is designed so it may be worn closed and very flat or open to emphasize shoulder breadth.

At The Theatres

Today

Kingston: "42nd Street." Chalk up a personal triumph for Ruby Keeler in this tuneful talkie of the theatrical district of New York city. This lavish musical comedy is one of the best song and dance pictures ever shown on the screen, and a talented cast, supported by hundreds of extras, all combine to make this drama an outstanding hit. Snappy music and choruses, some excellent scenery and photography, and the work of such recognized stars as Warner Baxter, George Brent, Bebe Daniels, Ginger Rogers and Guy Kibbee, all help to put this musical over with a bang. But Ruby Keeler, as the little country girl who heeds the call of Broadway, and who substitutes for a musical comedy star just before the opening curtain, makes good in a big way. Put this one on the don't miss list.

Orpheum: "Attorney for the Defense" and "Gold". Edmund Lowe is the star of the first attraction, the exciting story of a young attorney implicated in murder. This talkie moves along in whirlwind fashion, and is good for an evening of real entertainment. Constance Cumings and Evelyn Brent are also in the cast. "Gold," a western thriller, offers Jack Hoxie in the saddle with Alice Day contributing the romance.

Broadway: "The Big Broadcast." Grand music, some brilliant comedy moments, plus the addition of radio's most popular stars are all to be found in this novel story of a couple of down and out boys who purchase a radio station, and put on a big broadcast. Bing Crosby, Kate Smith, Burns and Allen, Vincent Lopez, Mills Brothers, Cab Calloway, Arthur Tracey, Boswell Sisters, Leila Hyams, Donald Novis and Stuart Erwin are among the stars who contribute their talents to the picture's success. For popular singing and enjoyable comedy, this talkie offers an evening of rare enjoyment.

Tomorrow

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Night After Night" and "The Riding Tornado." George Raft, Constance Cummings, Mae West, Wynne Gibson and Alison Skipworth are the featured players in the first double feature offering, one of the best of the current talkies. It's the story of a tough pug who buys a ritzy speakeasy, and who decides to become educated. There is excitement, comedy and excellent acting in this one. "The Riding Tornado" is none other than Tim McCoy, who breezes through a lot of difficulties before he wins the girl! Chapter number 3 of the "Jungle Mystery" will also be a feature of the program.

Broadway: Same.

In northern Ohio about 10 per cent of the peach buds, enough to bear a moderate crop, survived the February zero wave.

That night all the brigands are whooping it up.
"We're pirates, bold pirates," they sing as they sup.
But little they know in their gay
unconcern
That Puff and his laddies are boarding the stern!

One of the charter members is Paul B. Lawson, dean of the college at the University of Kansas.

Five Cases in Court.

Chicago—Five cases of beer, undelivered, were mentioned in divorce court.

Walter Jeziorny sued his wife, Margaret, charging she threatened to injure him if he tried to drink the five cases he ordered for delivery next Friday.

He alleged this was cruelty and asked for a restraining order.

As G. B. S. Pictures America And The Americans

George Bernard Shaw, in the United States for the first time, has a chance to greet his American "barbarians," many times the target of his sharp Irish barbs. Below in Shaw's own hand is a part of the addition he made to the biographical reference concerning his own views of America and Americans.

WEST SHOKAN

West Shokan, April 1.—Each passing day sees a much larger section of the reservoir west basin being cleared of ice as the vast fields become more and more disintegrated and broken up. This is a certain indication that spring is gaining a firmer foothold although much snow still remains in the mountains.

The sudden death of John C. Groves of Brown Station, well known D. W. S. supervisor, was a shock to all about the reservoir section. Mr. Groves was a familiar figure and one long prominent in connection with the Ashokan reservoir construction and maintenance, and was highly esteemed by every member of the D. W. S. force. All sympathize with the bereaved family.

The condition of William V. Colange in the Benedictine Hospital continues to show favorable improvement and it is hoped by all that he may be able to return home shortly.

The Olive town board met Wednesday evening in Olive Bridge hall for its once a month business session. All the members answered present at roll call. It is understood that in line with the general program of retrenchment the wage scale to be paid the town road workers this year will be subjected to a scaling down from 40 to 30 cents per hour.

Judge and Mrs. Henry Winchell, proprietors of Rocky Cliffe Poultry Farm on the Samsonville road, have placed an order for 1,000 Rhode Island Red chicks for delivery next week from the Red Bird Farm in Wrentham, Mass.

There was a very pleasing attendance at the Ladies' Aid Church quilting on Wednesday. Among visitors were a group of Samsonville ladies, also Mr. and Mrs. Golden Van Benschoten of Hemlock Knoll, Shokan.

The Olive Rebekah's public card party held Wednesday evening in Olive Bridge I. O. O. F. Hall proved a marked success, both socially and financially.

Mr. and Mrs. James Burgher of Maple Dell Farm called on Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Every at Traver Hollow on Thursday evening.

Frank N. Davis of Samsonville, distributor of the well known line of Rawleigh products, canvassed this section of his route on Wednesday.

Mrs. Nellie Jones of West Shokan Heights was a social caller in West Hurley vicinity on Thursday afternoon.

George Bishop of Olive Bridge, retired New York city board of water supply engineer, had several trucks employed one day recently filling in his driveway with shale from the inexhaustible supply at the adjacent Yale quarry dump on the reservoir property.

Mrs. Edward G. West of Allaben, third term local school teacher, was an after school caller at West Shokan Heights Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Katherine Sherman of Dwyer's Corner spent the week-end in Kingston with her mother-in-law, Mrs. Lilly Sherman.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schmoekel and daughter, Lou, were Kingston business callers on Thursday afternoon.

The familiar shrill of the Davis-Hendey saw mill whistle sounded over the valley on Thursday for the first time since the run of last summer sawing.

Mrs. Fred L. Weidner in company with her daughter, Mrs. Fred Vogt, and husband of Oneonta, recently returned from Florida, spent the week-end here and called on Mrs. Walter Bishop in West Shokan Heights on Thursday afternoon.

Assessors Frank Rowe of Olive Bridge and Frank Hyatt of Kingston, with Martin J. Every, chairman of the Olive Board of Assessors, have been engaged earlier in the week checking up on several properties in the town, having to do with the New York city contested reservoir tax case.

The week has produced some excellent sap weather. Crisp nights and warm sunshiny days with northerly winds are an ideal combination to the interest of maple syrup makers. Judge Fred L. Weidner has produced 101 gallons or better to date.

George Van Kleeck, genial Samsonville Heights community blacksmith, has recently presented his [illegible] [illegible] with a [illegible] [illegible] from the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of Kingston.

Miss Ruth Donahoe of Krumville is spending the week with Judge and Mrs. [illegible] Davis of Main street.

Ernest Eckert of Watson Hollow was engaged Wednesday hauling logs to the [illegible] saw mill.

Bernard [illegible], well known artist and writer, spent a recent evening with Mr. and Mrs. William Beesmer at Brodhead.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

The rent collector, fighting in the 147-pound class final, took the decision from the milkman with a few earnest, well-directed wallops to the chin. The crowd packing Madison Square Garden to its rafters roared approval as a New York University football player battered a barrel-chested farmer into submission in one round.

A little black boy named Greene, his shock of kinky hair standing on end and his double-jointed arms punching freely from all angles, won the flyweight open final from an aviation mechanic, two-time previous winner, in the "hit bout" of the evening.

A musician by trade took the count of ten in short order from a subway worker in the middleweight division, apparently much to the enjoyment of the appreciative galleryites.

All of which featured the exhibition of amateur boxing at its best and dressiest in New York, adding further to the conviction of 20,000 witnesses to the annual Golden Gloves final, conducted by the Daily News A. A., that the "simon pures" will provide more interesting fistic entertainment, per three-round bout, than most professional shows will furnish in an entire evening.

Fight For "Keeps".

No doubt there is a commercial side to the picture. Many of the boys are thinking of building themselves up for professional engagements, spurred on by busy managers in the background. Many a college football player may have similar thoughts, but there is no more question about the earnestness with which these amateur boxers go after each other than there is about the sincerity of play in the average college football game.

Boxing, in other words, is still a sport as it is put on by the Daily News A. A. and as it can be conducted in amateur ranks generally, if not harassed by the professional elements or subjected to control by professional commissions. It belongs to the clubs, the colleges and the Amateur Athletic Union, which has successfully demonstrated its ability to control the sport in most, if not quite all of the principal centers of boxing.

There appears no good reason, in New York, for example, to take amateur boxing away from the A. A. U. or the colleges and put it under the jurisdiction of the State athletic authorities. It would be just as sensible to have the Jockey Club assume control of harness racing at the county fairs.

Horsemen Gallop Again.

A number of names still are being mentioned for the head football coaching job at Holy Cross, the only outstanding 1932 vacancy still unfilled, but Harry Stuhldreher of Villanova seems to be one of the leading candidates.

The "Four Horsemen" seem to be on the gallop again. Jimmy Crowley, who has just taken over the Fordham job, and Stuhldreher played together for nearly three full seasons at Notre Dame. Both rank among the brightest pupils of the late Professor K. K. Rockne.

Rotary Boys Chose Baseball Leaders

The Junior Rotarians, a group of about 35 boys, sponsored by the Kingston Rotary Club, plans to have a baseball team this year which will meet representative teams from other groups of boys of similar age. Twelve years is the top age of the Junior Rotarians and most of them are a year or two younger.

But that is not too young to engage in politics. Thursday night was the election of captain and manager. Four members had been nominated for these important positions the week before and the candidates came to Thursday night's meeting with campaign managers all prepared for a political battle. It's interesting to note how well some of the youngsters can copy for many and rash were some of the promises some of the speakers made in their appeal for votes but the group was inclined to pick those who promised fair play and hard work. Robert Hotaling was selected manager and Christian Bauers was chosen captain.

The club meeting followed the boys period in the gym and swimming pool. Following the election of officers, the boys were addressed briefly by the three Rotarians present, Joseph Morgan, Harry Edson and Emil Boessneck and were shown how to shoot with the bow and arrow by Mr. Fuller, the Boys' Work secretary.

The boys are having great times in their club meetings and are getting some fine programs as the Rotarians visiting the club usually have something novel to present each week.

Wesley Dunbar and Robert Van Buren, two of the boys in the group, were recent dinner guests of the Kingston Rotary Club, a reward for perfect attendance and splendid deportment.

Pennant Chances In The National League

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, April 1 (AP).—There seems to be no harm in trying to "dope" the National League pennant race, an open competition indulged in annually around this time by the experts, but reservations are attached to any calculations about what may happen. At least five and possibly seven of the eight clubs figure to offer a wide variety of arguments in the 1933 pennant debate.

Last spring the St. Louis Cardinals, then on top of the baseball world, and the New York Giants, breezing back east under John Joseph McGraw, were picked by a majority of baseball critics to finish one-two. They wound up in a tie for sixth place. McGraw passed from the picture while his team was still in last place.

That's the way things are apt to happen, unexpectedly in Mr. John Arnold Heydler's "loop" and it is among the reasons why no great amount of family plate so far has been wagered on the professional odds making the Pittsburgh Pirates and Chicago Cubs joint favorites.

Cubs' Stock Falls

The Cubs emerged from the last World Series with very little prestige and their stock tumbled again this week as a result of a fractured leg for Kiki Cuyler, fleet outfielder. It places more responsibility on the bat and ability of Floyd (Babe) Herman, outstanding acquisition by the Cubs since last season. If Herman recovers his Brooklyn slugging form, of Frank Demaree can pulg the outfield gap, and if Cub pitchers like young Lon Warneke duplicate their 1932 performances, the champions may repeat.

Otherwise it looks like a big year for the Pirates or one of the so-called "dark horses" in the race, including the Phillies, heaviest hitting array in either league; the Cardinals, equipped with the finest young pitching staff in captivity, and the Brooklyn Dodgers, much improved in two vital spots, pitching and first base.

Strongest Outer Trio

Pittsburgh came off with first prize, Freddie Lindstrom, in one of the winter's biggest trading sessions. The former Giant's presence in the outfield with the ubiquitous Waner boys gives the Bucs the strongest outer trio in the league. The team, under the guiding stimulus of George Gibson and Old Honus Wagner, is blessed with a hustling spirit born of the sensational development of youthful stars like Piet, Vaughan and Grace. This drive and impetuosity may counteract weakness in the pitching department, where come-backs by men like Swetonic, Kremer and Hoyt are needed to complete the defense against slugging raiders.

The Cardinals, with sharpshooters like Dean, Derringer, Carleton, Walker and Hallahan, to say nothing of Vance, Haines, Lindsay and Mooney, must be reckoned with, no matter what the club's infield misfits may be. But for the loss of Shortstop Charley Gelbert, from a gunshot wound, the Red Birds easily could be conceded an even chance to win their fifth pennant in eight years. It is understood they made a flattering offer to the Phillies for Dick Bartell but it was declined. Unless Hornsby can show a come-back, which appears doubtful, the Cardinals will have two infield gaps to worry about.

Among Most Dangerous.

Brooklyn and Philadelphia round out the five clubs which figure now to be the most dangerous. The Dodgers, with Joe Judge ready for first base duty if Bissonette fails to recover and two impressive pitching replacements for the colorful Vance in Beck and Benge, look stronger than last year, when they finished third. The Phillies, fourth in 1932, depend upon improved pitching and a reliable second-baseman, Finn, to move them toward the top but they have not yet signed their slugging first baseman, Don Hurst, who led the National League in the vital department of batting in runs last year.

It is difficult to see how the Boston Braves and Giants can be more troublesome, without achieving a major upheaval. The Braves have picked up at least one new infield sensation in Dick Gyselman, but they distinctly need more power at bat to support a fairly good pitching staff. The Giants are showing lots of hustle under Bill Terry's leadership but their lineup lacks all-around class, they have only two pitchers of known quality and they need the daily services of Travis Jackson, now an uncertain factor, to be dangerous.

Like the Giants, the Cincinnati Reds have only two good pitchers, Lucas and Johnson, but Donie Bush's peppery leadership, plus the bats of Hafey, Bottomley and Lombardi, may produce unexpected results.

Good Loser

"A good loser," said Cactus Joe, "is a man who doesn't care to add to his losses by wasting time on unavailing sympathy."

May Oust Rabbit

Only two years out of high school, young Al Wright is giving Rabbit Maranville a battle for the second basing job with the Boston Braves.

Latest News from The Baseball Front

Fort Worth, Texas, April 1 (AP)—Fittingly enough, to Big Fred Fitzsimmons has fallen the honor of turning in the finest pitching of the New York Giants' exhibition campaign.

The veteran knuckle ball expert, one of the best righthanders in the National League, pitched seven innings against the Detroit Tigers yesterday and granted just one single. He struck out six men, walked only two and never was in danger of being scored upon.

McCarthy Stumped

Birmingham, Ala., April 1 (AP)—Joe McCarthy still has 12 days in which to decide just who will play shortstop for his New York Yankees, but he admits he's stumped right now.

Bill Werber, former Duke University star, apparently had the job clinched a week ago but McCarthy has been using Frank Crosetti in recent exhibition games and intimates it's still a wide open battle between the two.

Five Places Left

Miami, Fla., April 1 (AP)—Manager Max Carey will carry 35 Brooklyn Dodgers north with him but the axe soon will start swinging.

It looks now as though jobs have been clinched by Pitchers Clark, Beck, Mungo, Benge, Carroll and Thurston, Catchers Lopez and Sukeforth, Infielders Wright, Judge, Bissonette, Cuccinello, Stripp and Flowers, and Outfielders O'Doul, Wilson, Taylor and Frederick. That leaves five places for the remaining 17 players to battle for.

Heuser Outpoints Ebbets at Garden

New York, April 1. (AP).—The German menace of the light heavyweights, Adolph Heuser, has all but won himself another crack at Maxey Rosenbloom's world title.

For the second time in less than a month, Heuser handed Harry Ebbets, New York blonde, a beating in a ten round bout in Madison Square Garden last night and a return match with Rosenbloom probably will be his reward. Rosenbloom won their first 15-round tussle a couple of weeks ago by a close decision.

Heuser outpointed Ebbets by a wide margin in a slugfest which had the crowd of 9,000 roaring approval most of the way. The Teuton puncher won seven rounds with the third even and the fourth and tenth going to Ebbets. Although decisively beaten, Ebbets, a terrific puncher himself, always was dangerous and had Heuser in some distress in the final round. Ebbets weighed 169¼ pounds; Heuser 172½.

Johnny Raymond Breaks Hand and Loses to Dempsey

A broken finger and thumb on his right hand disabled Johnny Raymond in the fourth round of the feature on the Milk Fund card of bouts at Catskill Friday and forced him to lose by a technical knockout to Jack Dempsey, clever and hard-hitting 148-pounder from Brooklyn.

The accident concluded what spectators thought was a "whale of a scrap", that was Raymond's up until the accident. For the first two rounds Johnny worked hard, but it was not until the third round that he got his well-known uppercut working. He continued to land with it in the fourth, piling up points; but the last time it landed, catching Dempsey on the head instead of the chin, the result was disastrous for Raymond.

No sooner had the blow connected than Raymond was on the floor writhing in agony from the pain in his right hand. Referee Bill Singer, who had voted in favor of Johnny up to this point in the scrap, was forced to give the duke to Dempsey on a technical knockout verdict.

A physician pronounced the injury as a fracture of the hand, but Georgie Fay, Raymond's manager, said Johnny's thumb and finger appeared to be broken and that he probably will be forced to remain idle for some time.

Other Results.

Mickey Raymond, 172, Flatbush, outpointed Harry Austin, 176, Amsterdam, six rounds.

Tony Angus, 135, Haverstraw, drew with Jack Diamond, 135, Brooklyn, six rounds.

Jack Willard, 160, Brooklyn, knocked out Frankie Kouhout, 160, Kingston, in 45 seconds of the fourth round.

Jimmy Rodden, 130, Kingston, fouled Joe Turck, 130, Glasco, in the third round.

Spinnys Edge Out Bigelows, 26-24

In a game that required two overtime periods at Saugerties High School Friday night, the Bigelow Five of the village bowed to Alanson H. Short's Spinny Radio quintet of Port Ewen by the score of 24-26. A capacity crowd enjoyed the thrilling battle that was ended by Dan Joyce's field. Proceeds were for the benefit of the Saugerties American Legion.

The tilt was a close one from the opening whistle. At the termination of the first quarter the score was 4-all and at the intermission 7-7. The third quarter brought the Bigelows out in front 18-14 and at the end of the regulation time the score was knotted at 21 points. An extra session failed to settle the issue, which stood 24-24 and the basketeers went into a second overtime period which decided the game in favor of the Port Eweners when Dan Joyce sank his shot from scrimmage making the tally 26-24.

Railroad Leaders Meet With President

Washington, April 1 (AP)—Heads of the nation's railroad system and labor leaders were summoned to the White House today by President Roosevelt to talk over emergency legislation providing for a Federal co-ordinator to bring the carriers out of their troubles.

Mr. Roosevelt had before him a carefully worked out program framed by transportation authorities after days of examination and study.

The President is ready to act. But he wants first to talk it all over with the representatives of those most vitally interested—the investors, the operators and the men who depend on the roads for a living.

There were signs of a conflict of opinion among the group on what should be done and the method of doing it but there was agreement that something should be done.

The President called to his side the men responsible for drafting the program of action—Secretary Roper, Joseph B. Eastman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and W. W. Spiawn and A. A. Berle, rail experts.

Three Men Killed in Robbery of Home

Lacrosse, Va., April 1 (AP).—Three men were killed and one is believed mortally wounded in a robbery of a private home in Mecklenburg county five miles south of here last night.

The dead are Ben L. Cannon, 77, and his two nephews, Thomas W. Cannon, 56, and Bill Cannon, 28. A brother, Willis A. Cannon, 81, was rushed to a Petersburg hospital with bullet wounds in his head.

The crime was discovered shortly after daybreak today when negro workmen went to the plantation house to receive their instructions for the day.

Investigation indicated the killers enticed Ben L. Cannon to the smokehouse on a pretense of buying meat. He was found shot to death in the smokehouse ashpit.

The two nephews of Mr. Cannon evidently had given battle at the front door of the home, for they were found dead on the steps.

COMMISSIONER LEADS HOSTS OF TROUT FISHERMEN.

They started for the upper reaches of Dresserville Brook for rainbow, brown and native trout.

Kendall Oil Co. Has Oil Protection Plan

The Kendall Oil Company entertained more than [illegible] service station operators and employes, garage men and truck owners at a banquet in the Governor Clinton Hotel Friday night when the latest and what he called the safest means of dispensing oil—in cans like foodstuffs—was explained and demonstrated by I. H. Shearer, sales manager of the concern.

M. S. Allen of Delhi, district manager of Kendall, introduced Mr. Shearer and two speakers, local men. They were Herbert Segelken, who operates a station at Phoenicia, and Max Ferro of West Hurley. Both spoke in favor of Kendall and the new way of selling it to motorists.

Mr. Shearer, the featured speaker, said selling oil in cans not refillable, such as Kendall is doing, is the greatest innovation in oil sales in the last 20 years. It eliminates two serious obstacles—substitution of inferior oil by unscrupulous dealers and selling motorists a grade of oil other than that desired.

Regarding the substitution of inferior oil for that of better quality, the speaker said that tests proved the racket to be the fourth largest in the country. A survey made by the Kendall Company showed that once in every four times its product was asked for a substitute was given. "That's why all legitimate service stations welcome this new way of selling Kendall Oil in sealed cans. It absolutely eliminates this unfair competition from the oil racketeer and protects the motorist, assuring him of the oil he wants," said Mr. Shearer.

Mr. Shearer concluded by demonstrating the easy method of opening the cans which cannot be refilled and by telling of the care taken in refining Kendall to the degree that has made it the choice of motorists over a period of years, stressing the point that it is good for 2,000 miles as advertised by every dealer handling it.

That Kendall is pure and fit for human consumption was proven by Mr. Shearer in a manner that brought a smile to the faces of his guests. He poured some oil into a glass and drank it. One garage man said: "Gosh, that looks good. I'll order two cases."

Mr. Segelken, introduced as having in Phoenicia one of the cleanest and neatest service stations Mr. Allen, the toastmaster ever saw, lauded the feature of having oil in sealed cans which prevents dust and dirt from entering and ultimately getting into the crank case of cars to cause trouble in the form of grit. To illustrate he told of a trip across a western desert during which a can of oil he had in his car lost its stopper and the oil became filled with sand, causing him the trouble of straining it before he could put it into his motor. He also said that for the motorist who wants to see what he is buying, Kendall has the means of guaranteeing him the product.

Max Ferro, the West Hurley service station operator, dwelt on the fact that Kendall containers, differ from other oil companies' non-refillable containers in that they absolutely cannot be used the second time without detection. He illustrated by recounting an incident in which it was proven to him that a "non-refillable" container used by another oil concern could be opened and used again.

The Kendall Company has planned an extensive advertising campaign.

Ed. Coughlin is the local representative of Kendall.

MILK STRIKE SUSPENDED PENDING LEGISLATION

Rochester, N. Y., April 1 (AP)—With their milk strike suspended at least until Tuesday to permit legislative consideration of the Pitcher control board bill, western New York farmers today permitted shipments to pass unmolested into Rochester as contracts with the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association expired.

If predictions of strike leaders are borne out, at least 600 of the 1,000 striking producers notified the league during the last "cancellation period," February 12 to 28, that they would not renew their contracts, which automatically expire April 1. Albert Woodhead, president of the newly informed Western New York Milk Producers' Association, reiterated the farmers would hold out for three and a half cents a quart and instructed his followers not to release their products for less than that amount during the truce. The league pays one and one-half cents.

Extension of a strike truce declared yesterday noon came late yesterday after Woodhead had been informed the state senate had passed the Pitcher bill. The suspension, he said, will hold until the assembly has had an opportunity to consider the measure at Monday night's session.

Crash!—Go War Secretary Precedents When Dern Calls On 'Gold Braid Boys'

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—The new secretary of war, George H. Dern, has ideas of his own as to how Uncle Sam's military establishment should be run and he's handing some of the "gold braid boys" around the department a few surprises.

GEORGE H. DERN

When he took over the job, one of the first things he did was to go visiting. Instead of having the chiefs of the many different army bureaus come to see him he went to see them.

Through those seemingly endless corridors of the state, war and navy building (there are 12 acres of floor space in it) he trudged along, stopping at the various offices and paying calls.

That was something new for a secretary to do. But he got a big kick out of it.

"They tell me," he said, "that several officers almost had heart failure when they saw me come in."

Pershing Bossed Him

There's one visit, however, he hasn't been able to make as yet and one that he is looking forward to. He has yet to call on General Pershing.

That call will have a particular interest for the secretary. His soldiering days began with the general. Years ago when Pershing was then only a lieutenant, Dern served under him as a cadet in the R. O. T. C. at the University of Nebraska. Pershing was the commandant of the corps at Nebraska and Dern played second also in the cadet band.

He still remembers those days. He was only a Nebraska farm boy then. But they still look back to him there as one of the greatest football stars the university ever turned out.

He played in the position of guard and was captain of the all-victorious team that made football history in 1894. Incidentally, the manager of that team and his classmate was Arthur J. Weaver, governor of Nebraska from 1929-31, and a third classmate was Adam McMullen, chief executive of Nebraska from 1925 to 1929.

Dern himself served eight years as governor of Utah.

Studying His Job

Officers at the war department apparently like the jovial Utahan for his informality.

But at the same time they recognize in him other desirable qualities.

Although he is without military experience except that which he obtained as a member of the R. O. T. C. and as commander-in-chief of the Utah national guard during his term as governor, nothing seems to escape his notice at the war department.

What he doesn't know he finds out. And usually his method is to go personally to the authority.

Board of Education Granted Requests

the Immigrant Section of the Americanization and Citizenship Department has been growing smaller year by year. Of course the Quota Law, Rules and Regulations of Acts of Congress on Immigration would naturally affect this registration.

According to reliable information there are over 250 illiterates in Kingston—native white, foreign born white, negro, and other races—so Americanization and Citizenship Training, in its broadest application, must include the illiterates in its plan of work.

We have made every effort through the press, church, school, clubs, patriotic organizations, P.-T. A., personal contact, mail, etc., to aid and reduce the illiterates in Kingston but not with the success that was commensurate with our labor.

It was a very commendable act on the part of the Kiwanis Club a few years ago when making a survey of the schools of the city, the committee inspected the work of the Evening School. They showed an interest in the work and interviewed some of the men and women present. This personal touch created a better morale in the student body.

This year at our closing exercises a committee from the Auxiliary of the American Legion was present. Mrs. J. S. Metzger, president, spoke on Americanization and Mrs. E. J. Luedtke very graciously, in behalf of the Auxiliary, presented to Miss Anna Kahn and Mr. Hilding Wendelin each a gold prize for the greatest progress in the Americanization class for this year. I am informed that the Auxiliary will award this prize annually. The ladies of the Auxiliary deserve great credit for this work and I recommend that a letter of approval be sent to the Auxiliary for their encouragement and cooperation in our work.

Under instructions from the Division of Vocational and Extension Education of the State Education Department and through your cooperation we completed our organization to include:

1. Evening Apprentice Classes.
2. Evening Trade Extension Classes.
3. Evening Homemaking Classes.
4. Evening Commercial Extension Classes.
5. Adults Special Vocational and Educational Guidance Service.

We made every effort that our work should offer attractive classes in variety and number which would appeal to anybody and everybody who wanted to make a definite effort toward self-improvement, carrying out the idea that it was unwise to deny the service of the Evening School to adults during the depression. It is fine to note the generosity and liberality of the people who contribute to carry on this work, especially in the elementary sections of the illiterate and under-privileged. Imagine the pleasure—a father, a mother, a grandmother—who at an early age was required to leave school to help support a family or perhaps they never had the opportunity of going to school, joining an evening school. After a no easy task of going to school three nights a week in the cold, rain and snow, and attending faithfully for a few years they can say, "At last, I am able to read the newspaper and appreciate good books. I can write to my children and understand what they write to me."

Opportunity—is it worth while? The answer cannot be written today. Future generations will tell how we did our work.

Plan and scope of work for next year.

1. Reduce illiteracy in Kingston. Now 264.
2. Aid men and women to pass the Literacy Test so they may acquire full citizenship—the right to vote. About 20 fail each year.
3. Help every alien in Kingston towards citizenship. Aliens in Kingston 529.
4. Teach everything worth while for which there is a sufficient demand.
5. Make a greater effort to contact with those who need the help the Evening School can give.

THE NEWS-JIGGER

HERE'S YOUR SOLUTION.

Here's the answer to the News-Jigger on page 8, if you haven't solved it already. It's Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the treasury under Harding and Coolidge and through the greater part of the Hoover administration. Since last year he's been ambassador to England, but he's back home now due to a change in administration.
